BIOGRAPHY

With a distinguished career as a former government prosecutor, Mr. Bolton provides clients with a unique synthesis of high-stakes trial advocacy and sophisticated government knowledge. He has extensive experience in managing and trying complex felony cases and first-chairing high-stakes jury trials, including those involving homicides and other serious offenses. His expertise is rooted in a proven record of success in the courtroom, where he has supervised prosecutorial teams and coordinated with federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies.

This litigation experience is fortified by a robust background in government affairs. Mr. Bolton has routinely advised, engaged with, and briefed high-level stakeholders on intricate federal legislative and regulatory developments, as well as on updates concerning energy policy, regulatory developments, and State Attorneys General multi-state litigation. This dual expertise positions him to anticipate legal challenges from both judicial and political angles, providing clients with a forward-thinking and complete legal strategy.
